Will sweep across the place Where I have trod the sandy shore Of time, and bear to me no more, Of me, my day, the name I bore, To leave no track or trace.

And yet with him who counts the sands, And holds the water in his hands, I know a lasting record stands Inscribed against my name, Of all this moral part has wrought, Of all this thinking soul has thought, And from these fleeting moments caught, For glory or for shame.

THE PIRATE OUTWITTED.

Not many years ago-long enough, however, for Bangor to grow up from a litle wild, uncouth lumbering village into a beautiful city—there might have been seen, one day in September, a small fore in aft schooner lying at one of the rude log wharves, taking in a regular assorted cargo of pine lumber, potatoes, and codfish. If you step aft, and look over her stein, you can read her name-Sarah Ford, Bangor. And that afternoon, aftersher cargo was all on board, if you could have got a peep at her manifest and bill of lading, you would have seen that she was commanded by Captain Josiah Forbes, and bound for St.

Josh Forbes, as he was commonly called in Bangor, was born on the banks of the Penobscot, and brought up at sea; and at this particular time was just about twentythree years old, and master and owner of the schooner Sarah Ford. Josh had named his little craft, which was nearly new after the daughter of Colonel Ford, a very rich, aristocratis merchant of Bangor. There gor. was a perfectly safe understanding between Josh and Miss Sarab, entirely unknown to any one but themselves; for Colonel Ford would as soon have followed his only daughter to the grave as consented to her Reader, have you ever been to the island of St. Thomas, in the Danish West Indies? "Yes." Well, I am glad of it; for you will agree with me, that it is one of the loveliest of all those ocean gardensthe Virgin Islands. "No!" Well, then, come with me. It will cost you nothing, and a short visit will amply repay you for your time and trouble.

The Island of St. Thomas belongs to Denmark, and is situated just far enough within the tropics to enjoy all the advantages of a tropical climate, so liberal in its variety of fruits and flowers, and just far enough to windward of the larger islands to insure it against the ravages of vellow often rage with such malignancy during the summer months in the West India is lands.

Captain Josh Forbes was not very often taken all aback that afternoon; for when he got about a quarter of a mile up the nar row creek, he discovered moored alongside of the bank, half a mile further up, the New Granadian schooner he had seen at St. Thomas. In double quick time the Sarah Ford was running alongside the bank, and tied up to the trees, which grew close down to the water's edge.

Josh Forbes for once in his life was in quandary.
